CENTER FOR PEACE AND TRANSCULTURAL COMMUNICATION OPENED AT SUT

December 03, 2015 Today, at the State University of Tetova was the opening ceremony of the Centre for Peace and Transcultural Communication. This center was opened in collaboration with the State University of Tetova and Northern Illinois University in Chicago, United States of America. This center was launched by SUT Rector, Prof. Dr. Vullnet Ameti, Executive Vice-President and Provost of Northern Illinois University, Mrs. Lisa C. Freeman and Minister of Education and Science of the Republic of Macedonia, Abdilaqim Ademi.

The SUT Rector, Prof. Dr. Vullnet Ameti addressed a speech to the participants in this inauguration, who said that this center is meant to promote peace, conflict management and intercultural understanding worldwide.

"I am pleased to address you today on this important day for students, professors and the public opinion, because today, we, together with Northern Illinois University, from the United States of America, have opened the Center for Peace and Transcultural Management. The founding of this center aims to promote the global peace, conflict management and intercultural understanding. Centre for Peace and Transcultural Management, based at the State University of Tetova, aims to provide neutral academic platform, on which will be based the promotion of the diversity of discussions, with the aim of achieving peace through education models.

Through this centre, governments, students and key stakeholders will have access to resources to effectively manage conflicts and misunderstandings, to ensure global peace and economic prosperity", said the SUT Rector, Prof. Dr. Vullnet Ameti.

The Rector, Prof. Dr. Vullnet Ameti also said that our universities, founders of the center, will be engaged specifically in conducting the research of issues related to peace and intercultural management, will create a base of information on critical regional issues, will organize workshops, symposia and annual conferences, in which academic lectures will be held in accordance with our joint mission. "Apart from the aforementioned activities, the Centre for Peace and Transcultural Management in the future will offer certification training programs, symposia, courses for students, as well as for any other intercultural program that the center's officials consider important for the implementation of the mission. On this occasion, on behalf of the leadership of the University, academic staff and students, we would like to express our deep appreciation to the leaders of Northern Illinois University, from the United States of America, for their willingness to establish this center at a time when peace and communication between people has become a top priority for all of us", said the SUT Rector, Prof. Dr. Vullnet Ameti.

Executive Vice-President of Northern Illinois University, Mrs. Lisa C. Freeman, said that through this center it will be created a new model for intercultural and interethnic collaboration. "We are very enthusiastic for the collaboration with the State University of Tetova and for this I thank the Rector of the State University of Tetova, Prof. Dr. Vullnet Ameti, as well as the Minister of Education and Science, Mr. Abdilaqim Ademi, who is here with us. Through this collaboration we want to create a model of intercultural and interethnic cooperation here in Macedonia. It's a good opportunity for us to demonstrate academic strength for the benefit of the academic world and the community. Through this collaboration we will promote democracy, peace, intercollegiate collaboration and create bridges of collaboration among students also", said Mrs. Lisa C. Freeman.

On the other hand, the Minister of Education and Science, Abdilaqim Ademi said that this center has a great symbolic significance and is launched in the most important moment for the region.

"I am glad to be here today at this modest ceremony, but with a great symbolic significance, not only for SUT, but also for the whole country, because today is launched a center which is not based in the capital of our country, which is usual for such centers to be opened in the capital cities, but instead, it is being opened in Tetovo, at the State University of Tetova, and here lies the symbolism, because through this center, SUT, Tetovo, our country and the region will convey the American experience for democratic processes in our country, for the prevention or the management of conflicts, and also the promotion of peace between nations and peace in the region.

This center is launched at the moment I would say the most important for the region, especially given the challenges our country, the region and Europe are facing and I hope that the US experience will be conveyed very well through this center and through the State University of Tetova. The Ministry of Education and Science and the Government of Republic of Macedonia, highly estimate this action and the step made by both universities. We encourage both universities to continue their collaboration and this will be a window for students and the academic staff, but also for the university in general, to cooperate and to expand their collaboration to apply for various European and international funds, but more important, I think this center and this experience can be conveyed very well by the university, because university is an institution where there are not only employees and the academic staff and students, the university has positive influence and role in society and, I believe this center will be as I said earlier, a center from which will be conveyed the American experience for conflict prevention and the management and promotion of values of peace and will be one that in the United States of America will promote not only our university and our country but also the Albanian people in general. Thank you and congratulations", said the Minister of Education and Science, Abdilaqim Ademi.

At the inauguration of this center present was the academic staff of SUT, such as vice-rectors, Secretary General, senators, deans, heads of study programs, professors, students and other guests.

INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC CONFERENCE TITLED “RELIGION AND VIOLENCE” HELD IN THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF TETOVA HAS FINISHED

October 16, 2015 “Religion and Violence” was the topic of International Scientific Conference held at the State University of Tetova. This conference was organized in cooperation between SUT and two Austrian prestigious universities, the University of Vienna and the University of Innsbruck. This conference which lasted three days in the premises of SUT was attended by scientific researchers of this field, and many other guests, among them the religious personalities of the country, the region and the world.

At the opening ceremony of the conference titled “Religion and Violence”, the Rector of State University of Tetova, Prof. Dr. Vullnet Ameti noted that SUT as a center of education, research and free discussion is honored to open the doors and to host an important event for many topics to be addressed. “Today, I am very much honored that together with my staff, we’re hosting personalities of international reputation, who will refer to the above topic, but above all I believe that, together with You we feel respected, especially with the presence of religious representatives who in times of peace and in social strife in various stages of transition, humbly and determined, always worked in favor of the establishment of common religious and national values. Religions and cultures, although different, convey the message of peace, understanding and progress, as their mission is not only divine, but also national”, said the Rector, Prof. Dr. Vullnet Ameti.

The opening ceremony of the conference was also closely followed by the Minister of Education and Science of the Republic of Macedonia, Abdilqim Ademi. In his speech he said that, unfortunately, today the world is still horrified by the bloody wars in the countries of the East, where monotheistic religions and their sectarian divisions are incriminated. “Albanians are lucky, and perhaps the only positive example in the world that have managed to coexist in unprecedented multi-religious harmony. It was characteristic even in periods when religions defined everything in the development of human identity”, said the Minister of Education and Science of Macedonia, Abdilqim Ademi.

Vice Rector of the University of Innsbruck, Prof. Dr. Wolfgang Meixner said that the Conference was organized at the right time, because the world today suffers from violence. “Today, violence has spread to many countries, most of the violence has affected the Middle East, but the violence has erupted in different countries of the West, since the extremists have targeted various international institutions, all this violence displayed by invoking the name of different faiths, but every religion, every believer is clear that no religion or religions do not call for violence, but always call to peace”, said Prof. Dr. Wolfgang Meixner, Rector of the University of Innsbruck.

Professor of Islamic sciences at the University of Vienna, Prof. dr. Ednan Aslan underlined that the belief that the wars in the Middle East are convened in the name of religion is wrong. “Religion is growing equally to violence, particularly with regard to the incidents in the Middle East and North Africa. We are witnessing almost every day, that religion is used for violence, and in the end thousands of refugees are coming to Europe and escaping from their countries every day”, said Prof. dr. Ednan Aslan.

The political advisor of the delegation of the European Union Mr. Tibor Varadi, participant at the conference, emphasized that measures must be taken to prevent violence. “The main priorities of the EU, under the guidance of religious freedom are the issues addressing violence. We support all stakeholders who want to speak out against violence and to hold accountable the criminals who spread violence. In the name of religion many measures have to be taken to prevent violence, as well as educational campaigns, promotion and respect for diversity, strengthening of intercultural dialogue within society, and many other measures”, said Mr. Tibor Varadi.

The President of the Islamic Religious Community of the Republic of Macedonia, Reis ul-Ulema Sulejman Efendi Rexhepi said that all religions, in their essence contain the leaven of peace. According to him, all holy books convey messages, call to peace, love, prosperity, tolerance and harmony, and today, the majority of mankind preach and accept the message of peace. “We, religious clerics, are the most competent to preach peace and to invite in it. In peaceful time it seems that we manage to extend our influence on the believers, but when any violence or conflict breaks out, believers are getting out of hand, our appeal for calmness and peace fall on deaf ears. This is due to the fragility of our authority and personality we build among the believers. Surprisingly, in war times the clergy comes together while in peacetime stay away from each other”, said Reis ul-Ulema Sulejman Efendi Rexhepi.

The representative of Macedonian Orthodox Community, Boban Mitevski said that no one should dare to misuse religion for his personal interests. “Each religion is a source of love and goodness, a source of peace and prosperity. Religion must never be misused and there should be no violence in the name of religion. No one should dare to misuse religion for personal interests”, said the representative of the Macedonian Orthodox Church, Boban Mitevski.

The representative of Catholic Community, Kiro Stojanov emphasized that the world should not agree with violence. “We as a Christian community cannot agree with the war and we must not be indifferent towards people who suffer of war and violence. We need to spread the message of peace in order the people to hate violence”, said the representative of the Catholic Community, Kiro Stojanov.

The Representative of Catholic Church of Kosovo, Dodë Gjergji said that the topics that will be discussed in this conference are an imperative in which all of us live. “It is the duty of all social, political, ethno-cultural and academic institutions, civil organizations, as well as religious communities, and of every human who is committed to respond to the questions that concern us and to elaborate the events that surround us. We must help our freedom and citizens not to succumb to provocations, not to be transformed into a tool of violence in the hands of abusers of peace”, said Dodë Gjergji, representative of Catholic Church in Kosovo.

Professor at the University of Innsbruck, Prof. dr. Zekirija Sejdini said that in the analyses about the potential for violence and religion, were shown two antagonistic opinions. “One opinion is based on the belief that there is a blending of religion with violence. Radical representatives of this attitude do not see the solution in religion. The second opinion, which is usually favored by people of faith is the assumption that religion does not have anything to do with violence”, said Prof. dr. Zekirija Sejdini.

Present at the conference were also representatives of other religious communities in the Republic of Macedonia, the Republic of Kosovo, Albania, as well as renowned international researchers of social sciences.

First of all, prof. Mustafë Havolli gave a speech and addressed to all participants, expressing gratitude to all the professors, with whom he collectively has started the institution. Mr. Havolli, among others said that through the journey of the Universi College from the beginning of establishment till this moment where we are celebrating the 10th anniversary we have had some tough challenges, which have been faced thanks to the commitment, first of all to the management, and to all the professors and then of course to all the students as well.

Then he added, the rector of Universi College, dr. Dugagjin Sokoli, has the pleasure to greet and congrats all the participants in this anniversary, as well the graduated students. "In this special day for the Universi College, a day that will be marked for all you students, but for us as well, because together we are reaching a common goal - by saying goodbye to another successful generation, in other hand you reaching the biggest goals of your lives - by graduating", said Mr. Sokoli, by giving this three advices to the students:

1. Do your jobs with collocation - one by one. During your ordinary jobs try to resist not to get confused from the environment, unknown voices, opinions and jobs of others. And get back to the job you always wanted to make it reality.

2. Spend most of your time listening. For a very long time, I have always thought that my values are shown by talking, but when i wasn't talking, then i got to listen what others had to say, but with the other part of my mind I have been thinking through the whole time what my answer will be.

3. Listen to yourself. It is very important to listen to yourself time after time. You need to have courage to follow your heart and your intuition. Your heart and your intuition knows the truth about what you want to become in the future. Everything else is need to be put in secondary hand.

At the end, rector Sokoli said that Universi College will always be proud with you, your success will be our success, because you, everywhere you go, whatever your working, we are convinced and believe that you will do it with professionalism. With the knowledge you have gotten here, you will know to put it in practice. Our academic staff's commitment, to give you knowledge, and yours to get that knowledge are the best guarantee for your success in the future.
